Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The Independence Methodist Church is located in Jasper County, three miles southwest of downtown Medaryville in Pulaski County. The entrance of the church faces County Road 375 North. The 30' x 50' simple frame structure, built in 1872, was originally of a Greek Revival mode, but has since been altered to include other stylistic elements, such as the Gothic inspired lancet windows and the Italianate trim on the belfry.

The church is rectangular in its floor plan. The one story building is supported by a recently constructed (1948) concrete block foundation. The superstructure of white painted clapboarding is covered by a gabled roof of asphalt shingles. The most salient feature of the church is the projecting central tower of the north elevation. This bay, containing the main entrance and belfry, projects from the otherwise unadorned facade. A wide cornice fascia serves as a raking trim. Stairs flanked by metal handrails lead to the double doorway which is surmounted by a five-light transom. Above the doorway near the top of the tower is a single oculus. The short tower is topped by a truncated hipped roof. Surmounting the tower is a square belfry which resembles a belvedere because of its open sides. The top edges of the belfry openings are trimmed by Italianate fretwork. The belfry is capped by a steeply pitched, bellcast hipped roof. A small chimney is located at the south end of the roof, opposite the belfry.

The east and west elevations are penetrated at the foundation level by four square windows. Above the foundation are four windows with gently pedimented window heads which appear to have been Greek Revival windows converted to a Gothic style. The straight window sills and pedimented window hoods contrast with the lancet arch of the window sash. A vertical muntin divides the lower light of the doublehung windows.

In 1948 a basement was dug and a kitchen, dining room, restrooms and an automatic heating system were installed. New pews and interior furnishings were installed in 1949. In 1979 the roof was replaced.

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The Independence Methodist Church is significant, historically, because of its long, intimate association with the local community. Architecturally, the Greek Revival building was a fine example of nineteenth century protestant church design in Indiana. The church was later altered to accommodate Gothic and Italianate elements, as is evident by the door and windows and the belfry.

The Independence Methodist Church predates the organization of Jasper County by two years. The church was formed in the home of John M. Gillam in May or June of 1836, and was originally ministered to by circuit-riding preachers. The congregation increased and built its first permanent meeting place in 1849. The present church building was erected on the same site 23 years later, and served the local community as an active church until 1976.

The close association between the Independence Church and the local community cannot be overstressed; for most of the nineteenth century they were almost one and the same. Of the prominent citizens of Gillam Township listed in the 1883 county history, only six were not members of the church.
